

Stomach Troubles cured by KODOL

Under all curable conditions

Mr. D. Kauble of Nevada, O., was cured by Kodol of stomach trouble which had effected his heart.

Sold by Stone & Mercer, druggists.

Train Porters Given Orders.

All passenger conductors on the Monongah division, B. & O., have received orders from H. R. Laughlin, train master for the division, with headquarters at Grafton, regarding the work in the Pullman cars. The order states by way of explanation that many complaints have been received regarding the practice of porters who carelessly sweep the cars, while the guests are in their berths, raising dust and causing the passengers great inconvenience. The train master orders that greater care must be taken to prevent affording passengers such annoyance.

The Stomach is the Man.

A weak stomach weakens the man, because it cannot transform the food he eats into nourishment. Health and strength can not be restored to any sick man or woman without first restoring health and strength to the stomach. A stomach cannot digest enough food to feed the tissues and revive the tired and run down limbs and organs of the body. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat, cleanses and strengthens the glands and membranes of the stomach, and cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach trouble. Sold by Stone & Mercer.

14 Polar Bears.
Before contemplating challenging the management of the Great Forepaugh & Sells Brothers United Shows to a game of freeze-out here, on Thursday, Sept. 8, it may be well to remember that they have just added to their double zoological collection a whole Arctic menagerie, in the ferocious and fearsome shape of fourteen living, full-grown Polar Bears. Heretofore a single specimen—big or little—of this solitary and untamable species has been carded as among the rarest of features. The cost and trouble involved in collecting fourteen of these only North Pole discoverers—a greater number than even any Arctic explorer ever saw together at one time—would make an Ice Trust magnate gasp and even perspire. They are a feature, and the biggest kind of a one. No doubt about that.

When troubled with constipation try Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They are easy to take and produce no gripping or other unpleasant effect. For sale by Stone & Mercer.

A World of Wild Beasts.

Nature in her hugest, strangest and wildest forms, is conspicuously and comprehensively represented in the combined big menageries of the Forepaugh and Sells Brothers United Shows, to be seen at Clarksburg on Thursday, Sept. 8. The collection contains not only the extraordinary and unprecedented number of fourteen living full-grown polar bears, but the most stupendous hippopotamus known, the biggest herds of educated elephants, the most tremendous carnivorous wild beast terrors, and every rare animal from every clime, in staid flocks, droves and huge double dens of thrice the capacity of those in general use.

In Praise of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

"Allow me to give you a few words in praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Mr. John Hamlett, of Eagle Pass, Texas, "I suffered one week with bowel trouble and took all kinds of medicine without getting relief, when my friend, Mr. C. Johnson, a merchant here, advised me to take this remedy. After taking one dose I felt greatly relieved and when I had taken the third dose was entirely cured. I thank you from the bottom of my heart for putting this great remedy in the hands of mankind." For sale by Stone & Mercer.

FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR

Purges Glands, Prevents Pneumonia

A YANKEE TRICK

(Original.)
In high life there are cases where a person is admitted to the "swim" while his or her family are unrecognized. Miss Bevan was such a person. Why she was admitted was plain enough. She possessed the component parts of a belle—viz. a high bred appearance, a courtly manner, the faculty of ignoring people out of the set without appearing to do so and a talent for using people. Having these, it was possible for her to get along without wealth.

Miss Bevan was one of the guests at Mrs. Langworthy's "cottage." An old English duke accompanied by his son—the son a man of thirty—had come over to visit America, and the two had been secured by Mrs. Langworthy for a visit during the season. The Duke of Peppercorn, the father, possessed immense estates in England, and at his death the son, Lord Lightly, would inherit the dukedom and the estates. Miss Bevan determined to concentrate all her blandishments in one supreme effort to secure the son.

"I wish," said Mrs. Langworthy to Miss Bevan, "to post you with regard to the duke. He suffers under a form of mania. He is a kleptomaniac. His son is very sensitive about his father's defect and, though he takes the greatest pains to return everything his father steals, will not listen to any ordinary discussion of constitutional blight. They say it runs in the family only cropping out with age."

Miss Bevan, being of an ingenious mind, set herself to turn this knowledge to account. It was not long before she had formed a plan. One morning when a yachting party was proposed Miss Bevan at the last moment was attacked by an indisposition and remained behind. She kept her room till she saw through her window the yacht standing out at sea, then opened her door and looked into the hall. The doors and windows of the bedrooms were all open for airing, but there were no servants about. Stepping back into her room, she took from a bureau drawer a brooch, a necklace and a bracelet, besides other smaller articles of jewelry, then going again into the hall, she slipped into the duke's bedroom, the location of which she had noted. An ocean breeze blew in at the window, airing the bedclothes, which were thrown over the footboard, and his grace's evening dress suit, which was hanging on the back of a chair. Miss Bevan slipped her jewels into a pocket of the trousers and went back to her room.

The party returned in time for dinner, and Miss Bevan, having recovered, was at the table. She sat next to Lord Lightly and, with consummate tact, having learned the subject of his lordship most liked to talk about, drew him out on it, listening to every word he said without the slightest disposition to talk. For the next few days, or rather, evenings, it was noticed that Miss Bevan appeared without her customary adornment of jewelry. Lord Lightly was devoted to her and took occasion to compliment her on not needing gems to enhance her beauty, declaring that she looked more attractive in the simple costumes she wore when she left off the jewels. But one morning his lordship appeared very grave. He was reticent as to the cause, and no one understood it except Miss Bevan. She remembered it and was secretly pleased. That evening after dinner he invited her for a walk on the piazza and when there proposed a stroll through the grounds. Once out of hearing from those in the house he said:

"Miss Bevan, I have something of importance to ask you and to tell you. First, will you kindly inform me why for several days you have worn no jewels?"
"Must I?" she said, with a sympathetic note in her melodious voice.
"I would esteem it a great favor."
"My jewels are missing!"
"Let me ask you further whether you are aware that my father is afflicted with an old age with a peculiar evidence of senility—that he is a kleptomaniac?"
"My dear Lord Lightly, I have been so informed by our hostess. You have my heartfelt sympathy."

"Then you have suspected my father of having taken your jewels and have said nothing to me about the matter?"

"Nor to any one else. My jewels are not worth the wound I would have inflicted."

There was a long pause, after which Lord Lightly took from his pocket the missing articles and handed them to her.
"Miss Bevan," he said, with a voice full of repressed feeling, "I do not know of your ancestry, but you must be a born lady. You certainly belong to nature's nobility. Not one woman in ten thousand, picked from the world's best people, would have had the delicacy, the kindness, the unselfishness, to permit herself to be robbed of what women so dearly prize without a word."

Miss Bevan hung her head.
"Tell me," he went on, "how you brought yourself to keep silence. You certainly did not know that my father had taken your jewels, and if another woman told me every moment lost in following up the thief would have lessened your chance of repossessing them."

"I admit," she said under her breath, "that I would not have been so for bearing if the risk had been of wounding another man."

When a year later Lord Lightly, then the Duke of Peppercorn, returned to America to marry Miss Bevan, the world said, "Behold a case where a rich English duke marries a poor American girl." If the world had known the truth it would have added, "Yes, but was by a Yankee trick."
